WILL WAKE UP OLD NEW SALEM

London Money is Said to be Forthcoming for the Proposed C. G. & R. Road

ANNUAL SPRING REVIVAL

Tightening up of the Money
Markets Last Spring Made the "Railroad Going" Bad

A sure harbinger of spring is the annual pipe printed by the Columbus, Ind., Republican, to the effect that the Columbus, Greensburg & Richmond interurban is sure to be built. The proposed route of the road takes in the southern part of Rush county, touching at New Salem. The Republican says: The Columbus, Greensburg & Richmond traction company, well known in song and story, is not dead, but sleeping. And this statement is made advisedly because there is a report to the effect that the company is wide awake and that something will be doing shortly.

So much has been printed in times past about the plans of the Greensburg, Columbus & Richmond traction company that many people are prone to smile when they see an announcement made. However, the last announcement comes from President Amos K. Hollowell, of the company, a man whose word is as good as a bond, and some faith can be put in the report.

The present plans of the Greensburg, Columbus & Richmond is to secure financial aid from a London syndicate. Last fall, when the financial flurry made money as tight as the proverbial Dick's hatband, and the rate of interest was advanced to a mark that made further negotiations impossible across the water, the matter was postponed. Now that money is easier and that the rate of interest has moved back to some where near its former location, the negotiations have again been undertaken and it is said that there are flattering prospects of the right kind of a deal being made.

The plan is to interest the Englishmen in the proposed traction line and to interest them to such an extent that they will furnish the money required to build the road in the event the proper amount of interest is raised. A representative of the English syndicate will be sent here and if his report is favorable there will be a few more negotiations and then the actual work of building an interurban line.

FORMER RUSHVILLE WOMAN SUCCUMBS

Mrs. Nancy Edwards Died Monday at Her Home in Manilla

Mrs. Nan Edwards, widow of the late William Edwards, died at the home of Mrs. Frances Westerfield, in Manilla, at 2:30 Monday afternoon. Mrs. Edwards was born in Kentucky and was eighty-seven years of age at the time of her death. She moved from Kentucky to Rush county in 1857, since which time she has been a resident of this place.

Deceased formerly lived in Rushville and was an aunt of Sheriff W. L. King, Joseph Lyons and Charles H. Lyons, of city.

The funeral services were held this afternoon.

It is a tradition of the Austrian royal house that no Emperor must die lying down. He must stand up to receive the last dread messenger.

The Chinese pony is said to be somewhat like a sheep, his nose rounding off similarly and not unlike a camel, but in disposition he resembles a pig and in many ways is like a mule.

GIRL RECEIVES SLIGHT FRACTURE OF THE SKULL

Martha Gehring Injured in a fall
While Coming From School

Miss Martha Gehring, the fourteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Gehring, slipped and fell while returning home from school at noon Monday and suffered a slight fracture of the skull. A physician was called and attended the girl's injuries, while she suffered much pain as a result of the accident, yet the physician is of the opinion that no serious results will follow.

BEAUTY BUNCH HOLD A TALKFEST

Watson's Stenographers Have an Advance Harmony Meeting and Banquet

The Watson Beauty Bunch gave their "weekly" banquet today in Congressman Watson's private office, the large library table being pressed into service as a festive board on which many palatable and dainty dishes were served. Miss Dove Meredith acted as toastmaster and those who responded to toasts and the dinner bell were Mrs. Fannie Study, Mrs. Nancy Hogsett, Miss Hollie Mock, Miss Anna Waite and Miss Mae Bebout.

The idea of the affair was to hold a Talkfest and Harmony banquet in advance of the Democrats who feast tomorrow night. Several candidates for matrimony spoke; all feel assured of election.

YOUNG MAN TAKEN IN PRIME OF YOUTH

Guy Floyd Succumbs to Typhoid Fever at his Home Monday Evening

Guy, the eighteen year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Floyd, died at the home of his parents, in East Eighth street, Monday evening at four o'clock. The young man's death was due to typhoid fever from which he had been a patient, sufferer for several weeks.

Deceased had many young friends among whom he was quite popular and who will mourn their loss with the members of the family.

The funeral services will be held Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock at the late residence at 702 East Eighth street, conducted by Rev. W. H. Clark, pastor of the U. P. church. Burial will occur in the East Hill cemetery.

FATHER SAYS LOVER MURDERED HIS DAUGHTER AND HID THE BODY

John McFeeley Makes Startling Accusations Against His Nephew, Lon Cockrel---Also Implicates Levi
Cockrel, His Father

McFEELEY WILL GO BEFORE THE GRAND JURY

Will Ask Officials to Aid in Search of His Child's Body-- Girl Mysteriously Dissappeared--Neighbors are Suspicious

"Well, if you want to know the truth I will tell you; as God is my judge, I have every reason in the world to believe that Lon Cockrel killed my daughter." There was a tremor in the voice of John McFeeley as he spoke these words to a representative of the Daily Republican. There was a flash of fire in his eye and a clouded brow gave evidence of a desire for revenge. But a tear drop which came involuntarily from the corner of his eye mellowed the look of anger and passion and extinguished the flash of fire, born of deep emotion felt when he was obliged to make the startling declaration.

"But I do not think he was alone," continued McFeeley when he had gained composure, "I believe that his father had a hand in the work if they have made away with Nellie--my Nellie."

"That's a horrible accusation to make," the listener quickly put to McFeeley, "do you realize and appreciate what you are saying?"

"I do. Every word." He spoke with cool deliberation and calm decision. "I have thought over this; both of us have thought over it--that's my wife and I. I wouldn't have come to you now if it wasn't for that story you had in the paper the other day about a report of finding her body under the old house where used to live. We intended to keep quiet about this--although my God, it was a mighty hard thing to do, you know it would be--for we wanted to get sufficient evidence to swear out a warrant for the arrest of the guilty party or parties."

"Several days before you had that story about the dead body, my wife heard that some people on West First street were of the opinion that a body was thrown in a outhouse there. I went out to make a quiet little investigation and almost dropped dead when I found that the place they were talking about was the home lately vacated by the Cockrel family."

"Now I have every good reason in the world to think that this family were up to something. When my daughter disappeared they immediately moved away from their old house. I heard a remark that they dropped which made me suspicious. I might as well tell you the whole story while I'm at it now."

"You know Levi Cockrel married my own sister. When my little girl grew into maidenhood his son became attentive to her. At first I thought little about it, but when I heard that they were in love with one another I called a halt, simply because they were first cousins and I did not think they should go together. Young Cockrel defied me and on several occasions threatened to fight some. Soon I learned that he was giving the girl intoxicants to drink and I told him if he ever did it again I would either have him arrested or take it out of him myself. The next thing I heard was that they were living together at his brother's home, south of this city and that she was enceinte. You can imagine how I felt about this time. I tried to have him prosecuted on several counts, but failed each time. All this time his father was encouraging him instead of calling a halt."

"And there's where the whole trouble lies. I swore when my sister was lying upon her death bed that I would have revenge from Levi Cockrel for an act he committed there. As my sister--that was his wife--was in her last agonies and the death rattle was almost in her throat this man actually slapped her. I have two witnesses who will testify to this. From that moment on we were sworn enemies."

I believe I would have killed him right there but for fear the shock of us two men fighting would hasten my sister's death.

"Since that time this man has been the bane of my existence. With the smile of a devil he would egg his boy on to come and see my daughter when he knew it was tearing my heart."

Now I will tell you the reason I think they killed my little girl."

There was pain written in every line of the father's face as he took out a red handkerchief and wiped away the tears which were trickling down the deep furrows in his face. John McFeeley is not the best dressed of men, neither has he the face or physique of an Adonis, but he is a father and has a heart and feeling and a deep love for his offspring. He now spoke as if he was on the witness stand carefully weighing every word he said and only saying it after he had given a little thought to each sentence before putting them into words.

"When I finally told my daughter and young Cockrel that they must quit going together, they threatened to leave. I told him if he left with my girl I would follow them to the end of the world but what I found them and when I did I would kill him as he justly deserved. Well, you know they did leave her and you know how they left. Neither had any money. I had been sick and had written my sister in Hartford City to send me some money which she did but I never received it. It came here, but someone else got it out of the postoffice. When I confronted them charging them with having a hand in making away with the money and told them I meant to inform the postoffice authorities the money was returned to my sister in Hartford City. But that is neither here nor there. They did not have any money so they went among friends and secured clothing and cooked food. Cockrel got a big push cart somewhere and they loaded their stuff in it and left here in the middle of the night ostensibly for Kentucky. The girl was seated on top of a lot of bundles on the cart. I am told by friends who went to see them off, and Cockrel was pushing the cart. He said that he was going to show me something for he meant to go all the way to Kentucky overland without a cent."

"I afterwards learned that they did not go any further than Greensburg. In a few weeks the girl came back but I did not get to see her, for she left as mysteriously as she came. That is when I think they--they--a--killed her--killed Nellie." The man was sobbing and could hardly say the words. He continued:

"To several people she said that Cockrel did not marry her as he said he would and she was beginning to become penitent and remorseful for the step she had taken. She told several people she would like to come back to her old dad and tell him the truth, but she feared to. She went to see Mrs. Belle Hatfield, the proprietress of the Main Street House and told her she never was married and she felt mighty bad about it. I would have taken her back and God knows been glad to. The Cockrels were living then in the William Helm property on the corner of Pearl and West First street. The girl was last seen to enter that house and no one has ever seen her since. The family soon moved out and the house is still vacant. When I sent certain parties to them to ask them where the girl was they would reply that she was in Kentucky."

"Now the neighbors living near the old Cockrel house are complaining say-

Next Governor of Indiana Will Hail From Rushville--Watson
at Washington

A dispatch from Washington says: "Mr. Watson attended the reception given the Indiana Society tonight. To all inquiries as to the outcome of the gubernatorial fight he expressed the opinion that the Sixth District will furnish the winner and that his home is Rushville. He even went farther and said that the nominee will be an all, smooth-shaven man. Watson will remain here two or three days."

Twenty Mothers, Members of Rush County Church Receive an Odd Request

QUESTIONS ARE ASKED

Pastor of Little Flatrock Church
Asks Questions Regarding
Card Playing and Dancing

The services at the Little Flatrock church next Sunday evening, will be novel and of special interest. The following questions have been sent out to about twenty mothers in that community: What benefits are derived from a social game of cards or what evils are the result? Is the dance a benefit to young people? If not, why not? Would you like to abolish the dance in Rush county? If so, how? Are your social functions of such a character that they conflict with church obligations?

The answers to these questions will form the basis for the pastor's sermon. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Rev. Roscoe Smith is the pastor.

Over $700,000 is invested in the training schools, hospitals, homes and other institutions of the deaconesses of the Methodist church in this country.

ing they smell a peculiar stench similar to that of a decaying body. Mrs. Anna Hunter, who lives next door was one of the first to notice it and told a number of people about it. Mrs. French, another neighbor is complaining, and Mrs. Laura Horr says she is almost positive that it is a person's body. I have tried to get into the house, but so far have failed, but by all that's good and holy I will have the place thoroughly scoured before this week is gone or die in the attempt.

I intend to go before the grand jury just as soon as I can after they convene on Wednesday and have them take up the matter. Some of the neighbors living near the old Cockrel home are of the opinion that the poor girl's body was thrown in an outhouse for they saw them sprinkle ashes and some other material about the place before they left.

"I may be wrong--I hope I am, but I think that the girl told them she intended coming back to me and tell all and those people knowing what I would do under the circumstances made away with her. I think both the father and the son had a hand in the murder, if one was committed and I can't think but what there has been. They could never make me believe that she committed suicide if they do find her body."

Great beads of perspiration stood out on the face of John McFeeley as he told the story of his wayward daughter and how she might be now among the great countless legion, the victim of foul murder. He finished the story by adding: "Well, I believe I would rather see her dead than the wife of that scoundrel and the daughter-in-law of a man the type of Levi Cockrel."

LARGE NUMBER ARE FOR WATSON

Of One Sixth of Delegations
Chosen over Half Favor
Rushville Candidate

VOTES GIVEN ASPIRANTS

Show that they will Come in One,
Two, Three Order With all
Their Strength

According to figures given out yesterday at the headquarters of James E. Watson, candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, 156 delegates to the Republican State convention have been instructed or will vote for the Sixth District congressman. Of this number, ninety-six are from counties other than those comprising his own district. To the other candidates for nomination the returns give delegates as follows: William L. Taylor 14; Charles W. Miller, 52, and Hugh T. Miller, 6.

The number of delegates to the State convention will be 1467, which will make 734 votes necessary to nominate. Of the entire number 228, or about one-sixth, already have been chosen. The claims of Mr. Watson are based upon instructions given to delegates who have been elected and those instructed for himself and those instructed for his rivals and upon advices he has received.

From every part of the State comes encouraging word for the Watson boom, even from the home districts of the other gubernatorial candidates. In Ripley county, in the Fourth district, the home of Hugh Th. Miller, the following resolution was unanimously adopted at a convention there last week, according to the Batesville Tribune: Resolved: that we, the Republicans of Langhery township, in convention assembled, wishing to promote the best interests of our party throughout our State and desirous that harmony and good will should prevail in the Fourth Congressional District believe that these results can best be attained by our delegates to the State convention casting their first votes for our own district candidate, Hugh Th. Miller, and when a change to another candidate is deemed best by them casting their vote for James E. Watson, for governor and no other candidate.

The Kokomo Tribune, in last Saturday's issue, contains about two columns regarding Watson's visit there and concludes with the complementary paragraph: "Mr. Watson's voice was rich and resonant. He spoke with a fascinating fluency and earnest, unstudied eloquence. As he warmed to his work, his fancy took on a glow and his words fell in an almost bewildering torrent of apt phrases and polished periods. The listeners liked him immensely and when he gave them a graciously worded good-bye they responded with three rousing cheers."

SHRINERS GOING TO INDIANAPOLIS TONIGHT

A large number of local Shriners and their wives and sweethearts will go to Indianapolis tonight to see Marie Cahill in "Marrying Mary." A dinner will be served before the show at one of the hotels and a number of Shriners from over the State will attend.

THE ACCIDENT BULLETIN

Of the Indiana Railroad Commission Sets Out Some Very Significant Figures.

Interesting Comparisons With the Number Killed During the Previous Quarter.

Indianapolis, Feb. 4.—A decrease in the number of persons killed on steam railroads of Indiana and an increase in the number killed on interurban lines is shown by the accident bulletin of the Indiana railroad commission for the months of October, November and December. This is the second bulletin of the kind issued by the commission and presents interesting comparisons with the records compiled for the previous three months.

In the quarter ending Dec. 30, 1907, 85 persons were killed on the steam railroads of the state and 408 were injured. During the previous quarter 99 were killed and 367 injured. During the quarter ending Dec. 31 the interurban road accidents increased from 8 to 14 killed and from 34 to 70 injured. The total number killed during the quarter ending Dec. 31 on both steam and interurban lines was 99, against 107 during the preceding quarter, and the total number injured was 478, against 401 during the preceding quarter. Of the total number killed on steam roads, 38 were trespassers and 28 were travelers on highway crossings.

THE VOTE OF MINERS

Tom Lewis Elected President to Succeed John Mitchell.

Indianapolis, Feb. 4.—T. L. Lewis of Bridgeport, O., for eight years vice president of the United Mine Workers, will, after April 1, occupy the office of leader of the coal miners of the country so long and creditably held by John Mitchell. After that date J. P. White, president of the Iowa miners, will become national vice president, and W. D. Ryan, who for years has been secretary-treasurer of the Illinois miners, will occupy the office of national secretary-treasurer, W. B. Wilson, now a member of congress, retiring.

The result of the miners' national election held in the local unions in December was announced to the convention, which thereupon adjourned. The vote for president was as follows: T. L. Lewis, Ohio, 64,553½; W. B. Wilson, Pennsylvania, 62,472; total vote cast, 126,615½; Lewis' majority, 2,081½.

This vote was about 25,000 smaller than it was expected would be polled by the membership, which is approximately 300,000 strong. The vote for vice president was not divided, there being only one candidate. The vote for secretary-treasurer was quite one-sided and was as follows: W. D. Ryan, Illinois, 82,345½; John Fahy, Pennsylvania, 40,918½.

Behrens Case Delayed.

Jasper, Ind., Feb. 4.—The trial of Charles Behrens, former cashier of the People's State bank, Huntington, accused of embezzling funds of the bank, has for the fourth time been interrupted by sickness. First a juror was taken sick. Then Mr. Behrens became ill. When court reconvened another juror became sick, and when the case was again taken up this same juror was notified of the illness of his wife, who was threatened with pneumonia, and the case was again continued.

Policeman's Unusual Accident.

Vincennes, Ind., Feb. 4.—Patrolman Henry Nieters lies at the point of death at his home in this city. He is forty-five years old. He had completed a night on his beat and was ascending the steps in the city building when he slipped and fell. His revolver, which he was carrying in an inside coat pocket, fell out and was discharged, the bullet tearing a hole in his right thumb and burying itself in his neck. He nearly bled to death before his condition was discovered.

Caught by Train.

Muncie, Ind., Feb. 4.—O. W. Samuels, forty years old, married, employed as a switchman by the L. E. & W. railroad, was almost instantly killed in the company's local yards by a Lake Erie switch engine. Samuels was standing on the track watching a freight train pass on another track when he was struck. He was dead when found. He had been in the company's employ for many years.

Unemployed Demand Work.

Evansville, Ind., Feb. 4.—A meeting of the unemployed men in the city was held and resolutions were passed asking the city, county and state to undertake improvements at once in order to provide work. Speakers at the meeting asserted there were 2,000 men unemployed in the city.

The strike of boilermakers against the several railroads in Minnesota has been declared off.

BENEFIT TO WIDOWS

House Passes Pension Bill of Far- Reaching Importance.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Three of the giants of the house of representatives had their innings Monday. Technically the Indian appropriation bill was under discussion, but legislation was relegated to the background while national politics occupied the stage.

Before the political question cropped out, the house, with next to the largest attendance of the session present, with but one dissenting voice, passed a general widows' pension bill granting a flat pension of $12 a month to the widows of all honorably discharged soldiers of the United States who have not heretofore received the benefits of the pension law, and an increase of $4 a month for those who have under the act of June 27, 1890. The law expressly waives the limitation of property holdings. The bill involves the expenditure of more than $12,000,000 annually.

The political debate was opened by Mr. Townsend of Michigan, who in a prepared speech, claimed for the Republican party credit for all national legislation in the last fifty years of vital interest to the public. In this he was vigorously disputed by Mr. Cockran of New York, who afterward launched into a discussion of the president's message of a few days ago, his remarks frequently evoking applause on both sides of the chamber. The president's utterances in that document, he declared, were such that neither party could ignore, for he had named the conditions for which both must contend. He characterized President Roosevelt as the only "crusader" in the Republican party and said that he could not, in view of his statements, with honor again accept the nomination for the presidency. Mr. Bryan also was a crusader, and he believed that with the president's message as his guide, Mr. Bryan would become the foreordained champion of law and order.

Mr. Hepburn also defended the president's message and said that condemnation of it had come only from the great malefactors of the age, "and the gentleman from Ohio," meaning Senator Foraker. While the debate was on almost every seat on the floor and in the galleries was occupied. The day in the senate was chiefly devoted to a consideration of bills on the calendar, several of which were passed.

THE COUPLING BROKE

Otherwise Entire Train Would Have Plunged to Ruin.

Pottsville, Pa., Feb. 4.—The Pennsylvania passenger train from Shenandoah to Pottsville escaped a frightful accident yesterday afternoon when the engine left the rails on top of the Broad mountain near the Frackville station and plunged over an almost perpendicular embankment to a road 100 feet below. The coupling between the engine and the first car broke and the coaches remained on the track. Engineer U. G. Siegfried of Pottsville was crushed to death, but his fireman, R. R. Schock, escaped by jumping.

A child of Mr. and Mrs. Smith, living south of town died last Friday. The baby was four weeks old.

The funeral of Miss Anna Cotton, who died at the Sexton sanitarium last Wednesday was held at the residence Saturday at 10 o'clock. The remains were interred Forest Hill cemetery, Shelbyville. The funeral was attended by a number of Manilla people but the inclement weather kept a number away who would have otherwise attended.

Joseph Edward Shook was five years old Saturday and twenty of this boy playmates and friends spent the afternoon with him. The young fellows were royally entertained by their host, assisted of course, with the material things that makes a boy's heart glad, by his mother and grandmother. Cake, ice cream and popcorn were served, and where is the boy that would go back on these. Amusements were provided for the little folks in the way of games suited to their ages. The boys all insisted that they had the time of their lives and were difficult to be "Shook" away.

Andersonville.

Saturday was one of the worst winter days this year.

Aunt Liza Hite, who is making her home with Gabe Hildreth, continues very poorly.

There is talk of a lady preacher holding a series of meetings at Mt. Zion soon.

Edward Lewis and wife will leave the first of next month for Nebraska. Ed. has made up his mind to go West and grow up with the country.

Omer Russell and Mr. Gimel, of Clarksburg, were shaking hands with old friends Saturday evening.

Omer Crowl and Alex Davison and families will leave Wednesday for their new homes in Nebraska. Mr. Crowl has purchased a large tract of land there.

Frank Cupp, of Jackson township, Rush county, spent last week with friends and relatives south of here.

Thomas Barber and wife have returned home from a visit with Lewis Lefforge and family in Hancock county.

Prof. Merrill, who has taught school here for many years, was compelled to resign Monday on account of poor health. He has been failing in health for some time and has been unable to speak above a whisper during the last month. Prof. William Moore will finish the term of school.

Mr. Moore is an able man and is only getting back home when he enters the school room.

John Davison will leave next week for New Mexico, where he took a claim one year ago. Mr. Davison says it is the land of milk and honey.

Rev. Selig will begin a series of meetings at the U. B. church soon. He recently closed a meeting at Buena Vista with several additions.

It is to be hoped that the meeting at Mt. Zion has done some good.

Isaac Goble, of Rushville, was in these parts Friday calling on friend and looking after his farm.

John Mahin and wife of Salt Creek spent last week with Joe Fey and wife, south of here.

Mrs. Frank Moore is visiting relatives at Kansas City.

The Red Men gave a supper at their hall on last Thursday night. Many were present. The lodges of this place are doing a great business this winter in the way of membership.

Candidates are making all kinds of promises now, and if they are elected they will stone the road that they live on and your road can build itself. It would be well to remember those fellows in time of election.

This being leap year many of our maids are taking advantage of it and in some localities are causing much trouble to the bachelors and maybe some preachers. Many bachelors have been made to blush against their will. Some have been sent home, never to return, while others are afraid of being sent home. Many weddings are looked for during the year 1908. In one community it is almost a war as to who will get the preacher. Girls, you had better hurry; next year the preacher will have something to say, but then they can have another meeting.

Worthy Banks moved from near Raleigh to George McClure's property at Fairview last week.

Ozro Pumpfrey moved last week from Walter Heeb's farm west of Fairview to the Glidden farm near Raleigh. Mr. Heeb will move to his farm in the near future.

BLOW TO BOYCOTT

Supreme Court Hands Down a Ruling of Large Importance.

Washington, Feb. 4.—For the third time within a month the supreme court of the United States yesterday promulgated an opinion construing laws adversely to the contention of organized labor.

The first of the decisions was rendered on Jan. 6, in the case of some railway employees who sought to secure damages under what is known as the employers' liability law, making railroads responsible for injuries resulting from the negligence of fellow servants, which the court held to be unconstitutional. The second important finding in this line was announced on the 23d ult., when the Erdman arbitration act forbidding the discharge of employees because they are members of labor unions was also declared to be invalid. The verdict rendered yesterday was in the case of Lawler vs. Loewe, the former a member of the hatters' union and the latter a hat manufacturer of Danbury, Conn. The case involved the applicability of the seventh section of the Sherman anti-trust law to conspiracies by labor unions to boycott articles entering into interstate trade. Under the terms of that provision the complaining party may collect three times the amount of his loss if the charge is sustained. The union fought the case on the ground that the law was inapplicable to such organizations, but the court, whose opinion was announced by Chief Justice Fuller, failed to accept this view, and in effect held that the unions could not be permitted to interfere by boycott with the free exchange of commerce between the states. There was no dissenting opinion.

Chief Justice Fuller continued: "The act made no distinction between classes. It provided that 'every' contract, combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade was illegal. The records of congress show that several efforts were made to exempt by legislation organizations of farmers and laborers from the operation of the act and that all these efforts failed, so that the act remained as we have it before us."

When asked for an expression of opinion in regard to the decision of the supreme court in the Loewe case, Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, declined to make any comment at this time.

CAPITOL FRAUD CASE

Further Interesting Evidence in the Pennsylvania Trial.

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 4.—Bills, invoices and furniture showing that prior to securing the capitol furnishing contract in 1904, Contractor Sanderson sold furniture to the state on the basis of "linear foot" measurement, were put in evidence at the trial of Sanderson, former Auditor General Snyder, former State Treasurer Mathues and James M. Shumaker, former superintendent of grounds and buildings, in the Dauphin county court. The defense fought vigorously against the introduction of this evidence, without which it would have been difficult for the commonwealth to show that his charges by the "surface foot" measure were irregular, but was overruled by Judge Kunkel.

The commonwealth also connected the former state officers with Sanderson in the conspiracy charge by showing that they certified to bills containing the wrong item number in the schedule upon which Sanderson was given the capitol furnishing contract. To do this the state's lawyers showed that previous to the payment of the bill for sofas, tables and clothes-trees in the case now on trial, Sanderson had rendered bills under the proper number in the schedule and contended that therefore Snyder, Mathues and Shumaker must have had knowledge that the certification of the bill under the wrong item was fraudulent.

One of the senate sofas measuring 11½ feet long, 2½ feet deep and 5½ feet high was brought into court as an exhibit. The commonwealth showed that a sofa six feet long sold on the "surface foot" measurement under the special schedule of 1904 by Sanderson at the rate of $18.40 cost the state $358.80, but that in 1899 he collected only $141.05 for a 6½-foot sofa at $21.70 per foot. The commonwealth does not expect to close its case before Thursday.

Mr. Brick Renominated.

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 4.—Abraham Lincoln Brick was renominated for congress by the Republicans of the Thirteenth district. There was talk of opposition to him, but it faded away at the finish. Brick is the first Republican congressman renominated in Indiana this year.

Steamer Burned in Blizzard.

Halifax, N. S. Feb. 4.—In the midst of a wild blizzard yesterday afternoon the steamer St. Cuthbert was burned to the water's edge off the Nova Scotia coast. Fifteen members of the crew were drowned by the swamping of a small boat in which they attempted to leave the vessel after fire had broken out. The other thirty-seven members of the crew, including the captain, were rescued.

Democrats to Confer.

Washington, Feb. 4.—A conference of Democratic senators has been called for today to discuss the policy to be adopted by the Democrats of the senate in connection with approaching currency legislation. There was some good-natured chaffing among the Democrats as to a possibility of the conference called for today taking up the president's message and preparing a resolution endorsing it.

The smallpox epidemic at Kobe, Japan, is increasing alarmingly and hospitals are over-crowded.

Beacon Fires in China.

In China such beacon fires as spread the alarm of the Spanish armada through England used to be the call to war. Many years ago, the story goes, the emperor sat with a beautiful woman looking toward the beacon hills. She would like to see those waiting piles lighted, and upon her insistence the thing was done. The greatest excitement prevailed throughout the provinces, and troops came hurrying in from all sides. When the leaders learned that no danger menaced, that the fires were lighted to satisfy the whim of a woman, their wrath fed on their lost confidence, and with the actual call to arms the response was slow and unenthusiastic. It was a repetition of the old story in Webster's spelling book. "Wolf" had been cried too often.

Antiquity of the Mortgage.

The legal document known as a mortgage can be traced as far back as the dawn of authentic history. The mortgage comes directly down to us from the Romans, but its antiquity is much more remote than the Roman nation. The Greeks, Carthaginians, Persians, Egyptians, Babylonians, all knew of the mortgage and daily used it in their business transactions. It is safe to say that the custom of giving mortgages is practically as old as settled human society.—New York American.

More Than Luck.

"Do you believe in special providence?"

"Sure! When I was a boy the school I attended was struck by lightning one night and burned."

"Nothing special about that?"

A Letter Of Interest

The following letter from Postmaster Ben. L. McFarlan is of interest to all our subscribers who receive their paper by mail:

Rushville, Ind. Jan. 9th, 1908.

To The Publishers of The Republican:

Your attention is called to the following changes in the Postal Laws effective April 1st, 1908.

Section 436, Paragraph 3.

A reasonable time will be allowed publishers to secure renewals of subscriptions, but unless subscriptions are expressly renewed after the term of which they are paid, within the following periods:

Dailies, within three months;

Semi-Weeklies, within nine months;

They shall not be counted in the legitimate list of subscribers, and copies mailed on account thereof shall not be accepted for mailing at the second class rate of postage of one cent a pound, but may be mailed at the transient rate of one cent for each copy, prepaid by stamps affixed.

The right of a publisher to extend credit for subscriptions is not denied or questioned, but his compliance or non-compliance with this regulation will be taken into consideration in determining whether the publication is entitled to transmission at the second-class postage rates.

Respectfully,

BEN. L. MCFARLAN,

Postmaster.

To make a long story short the sum substance of the letter is "Pay Your Subscription in Advance."

This course is not a law of our own but of Uncle Sam's and there is no getting around it by us, if we want to send our papers through the mail.

On April first (time set by Uncle Sam) we will have to discontinue all papers that are not paid up to that time, (April 1st, 1908.)

We would ask that any subscriber whose red tag on the paper does not read "paid" or later, give this matter their immediate attention. Remember this is Uncle Sam's law,—not ours.

TOM J. GERAGHTY, City Editor. CHARLES S. VAIL, Associate City Editor

RUSHVILLE, INDIANA, FEBRUARY 4, 1908

An effort is again being made among the Democrats of the State to have a daily State paper by starting a morning edition of the Hoosier, the recognized Democratic State organ, published weekly now.

The Commercial agencies report that financial conditions are continually improving—although progress is slow. The fact is the year 1908 will be a first class business year, if people will make it.

That Mr. Watson will have no difficulty in securing the nomination for governor is clearly indicated by the result of the delegate conventions so far held. Out of a total of 228 delegates so far selected, Mr. Watson claims 156. The total number of delegates to the State convention will be 1467, consequently it requires 734 votes to nominate the present known strength of the four gubernatorial candidates is Watson 222, Taylor 255, C. W. Miller 146, H. T. Miller 96. All indications certainly point toward Watson.

Remember, this is campaign year and every Republican should have the county party paper. Won't you try to get some non-subscribers to take the Republican for this year at least? The Daily Republican is conceded to be one of the best county seat papers in this State. It is a large eighth-page paper and costs no more than the dailies in the counties all around Rush county, which are only half as large.

The Semi-weekly Republican cannot be beat for the money—large eighth-page paper which comes to you twice a week for only $1.50. Instead of increasing the subscription price, as the papers all over the country have been doing, the Republican has enlarged the paper from a four-page to an eighth-page paper. Every Republican in Rush county should take either the daily or semi-weekly Republican.

A boom has been started in the East in the interest of ex-Governor William L. Douglas, the great shoe manufacturer of Brockton, Mass., for the presidential nomination on the Democratic national ticket. It is claimed for him that he is a banker and understands the currency question; that he is a manufacturer and knows the tariff situation; that he is not identified with the factions that have rent the Democratic party; that he carried the rock ribbed Republican State of Massachusetts by a phenomenal majority, and last, but not least, that he has no past political record like Bryan's. Douglas, the shoe man, would no doubt make a strong man for the Democrats, stronger perhaps than any one so far in sight.

Miss Gladys Vanderbilt has just married a Hungarian count who owns a name that almost involves a sneeze on the part of the American who tries to pronounce it. The large dailies have given a gorgeous account of the affair. The long family pedigree of the groom and the wealth of the bride, the appearance and costumes of the principal guests, the number and value of the presents (the decorations and every detail of the ceremony—all have been elaborately described for the benefit of the public which likes to read of such events.

Yet, after all, what was there about the affair that made it so different, apparently, from hundreds of other weddings that took place that day, but with no more than local comment? Miss Vanderbilt and Count Szecheni are married and the news is flashed over the country at a great expense. A young couple gets married in the presence of their friends in a small town and when the home paper writes it up people who read with keenest relish the long account of the Vanderbilt wedding, and wished it were longer, perhaps said of the account of the local event, "What a lot about such an affair." Why this difference in viewing the two events?

It is not in the character of the principals. Miss Vanderbilt was doubtless a most estimable young lady, but hundreds of other young ladies just as estimable were married the same day. Count Szecheni may be far better than the majority of foreign fortune hunters (we hope he is,) but in character hundreds of his peers that same day led their brides to the altar. If it was not character neither was it natural gifts that caused such prominence to be given to the one event and only local notice to the others.

In truth the only difference was money and that which money supplies. If Miss Vanderbilt had been poor instead of rich, and if the accident of birth had not made the groom a count instead of a laborer, the world would never have heard of their marriage for there would have been none.

Therefore, it all resolves itself into a question of money and not of brains, moral worth or good deeds. We find no fault with the prominence given the Vanderbilt wedding, but let us not forget that the vast majority of the American young people whose marriage excites no more than a local interest are just as worthy as the couple whose wedding set two continents talking, and that in all probability they will find more real contentment and happiness in life even though they may live in cottages instead of castles.

INDIANA POLITICS

BY ROBERT G. TUCKER

Indianapolis, Feb. 4.—R. B. Oglesbee, clerk of the bank department of Auditor of State Philheimer's office, has compiled a report comparing the condition of the state banks of Indiana at the close of business Dec. 3, 1907, and Sept. 30, the same year. Sept. 30 was the end of the last fiscal year in the banking department. The report shows that the state banks were not seriously affected by the financial depression. Nine new banks were started between Sept. 30 and Dec. 3. The total paid-up capital stock on Sept. 30 was $9,626,800; on Dec. 3, $9,839,037. The total resources, however, decreased from $64,079,751.19 to $60,882,646.22. Mr. Oglesbee says that the reports he has received indicated that the state bankers took prompt and effective steps to protect their depositors.

The right of the Indiana general assembly to prohibit the organization of high school fraternities will be questioned. Rensselaer will be the scene of the questioning. Attorney James A. Ross of this city has been engaged by the Beta Phi Sigma fraternity of the Rensselaer high school to carry the case through the courts, and the legal battle will be on within a few weeks, it is expected. The school board of that city adopted a resolution practically barring from the schools any student who belongs to a high school secret society, and yesterday was the last day of grace granted by the board. Accordingly, all were advised to renounce their fraternity with the exception of one member, and the case will be fought out in his name. As a matter of fact it is hinted that the students have the backing of their parents in the contest with the school board. In Rensselaer, it seems, the fraternity has been conducted in a manner that has won the approval rather than the disfavor of the parents. The Rensselaer society is one of several chapters of the Beta Phi Sigma fraternity in Indiana.

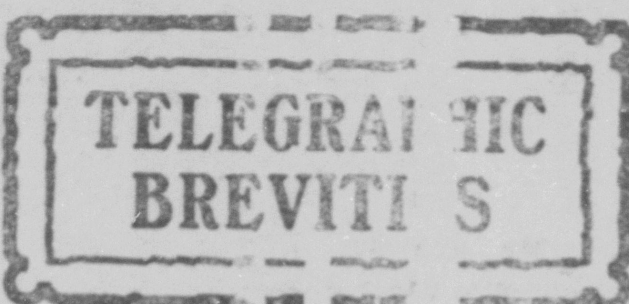

Judge Cox of Peru, who was on the bench of the Miami county circuit court from 1880 to 1902, is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for judge of the supreme court. He has no opposition up to this time. Judge Cox has the hearty endorsement of the members of the Miami county bar, who praise his ability as an attorney and judge. He was a member of the legislature in 1907 and advocated the passage of the employers' liability act and other reform measures that failed of passage because of a deadlock between the two parties. He has been prominent in Democratic politics for many years. His son, E. E. Cox, is editor and publisher of a Democratic paper at Hartford City and was formerly president of the Democratic State Editorial association.

The indictments against Henry W. Marshall of Lafayette, George Baxter, Thomas Shufelton and John Rosasco, in the asphalt paving fraud cases, were not pressed in the criminal court on motion of Elliott Hooton, prosecuting attorney. The action virtually means that four of the defendants are out of the litigation entirely. Marshall is president of the Western Construction company, and formerly speaker of the Indiana house of representatives, and Tenth district member of the Republican state committee. He is one of the prominent business men and politicians of Indiana, and his friends have insisted from the start that there was not sufficient evidence to hold him.

Aspirants for place on the Indiana delegation to the Denver convention are beginning to show signs of activity in several districts, and it is likely that there will be a full set of candidates for delegates to the national convention within a short time. The first to announce were Capt. Thomas Hanlon of New Albany and Perry McCarty of Paoli, who want to go to the Denver convention as delegates from the Third district. They have publicly pledged themselves to vote for Bryan.

The Republicans of the Fifth district will hold their convention at Brazil, Feb. 26. The Eleventh district convention will be held at Marion on March 12, and the Ninth at Frankfort, March 5. No other districts have fixed the dates for their conventions.

HOUSEBOATING ON BIG SCALE.

Idea Which May Grow Into an Extensive and Profitable Industry.

An enterprising sea captain of Falmouth, England, has hit upon a plan by which people who desire to enjoy sea life without assuming the risks of an ocean voyage can be accommodated with profit, says the Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin. He is looking for an obsolete ocean liner, which he intends to deprive of her power plant in order to secure more room and convert the ship into a floating hotel. The idea is to keep the ship at anchor off Falmouth and provide for the comfort of 150 or more passengers on an ocean trip that is limited by the length of the anchor chain and the swing of the ship. Amusements will be organized on board, boating and fishing parties will be arranged, and those who take to sea life of this kind will be provided with diversions sufficient to take their minds from the fact that they are at anchor all the time. It is estimated that all this can be done at a profit for charges somewhat lower than those of first class hotels ashore.

Houseboating on a large scale might appeal to investors on the great lakes. A large steamer moored safely in a harbor like that formed by the breakwater at Milwaukee would be an attractive floating hotel, on which landlubbers could take an imaginary lake voyage without running the risks of seasickness or delays by storms. A hotel at anchor in the bay would be "far from the madding crowd," yet near enough at all times to enable a merchant to drop ashore for a few hours' business each day. It would be a quiet, dustless and smokeless place in which to pass the hot weeks of mid-summer.

FARMERS TO HOLD A BIG FOX DRIVE

Ripley Township Citizens will Chase Willy Animal Next Thursday

An old fashioned fox drive will be indulged in in Ripley township, this county, next Thursday, February 6th, beginning at 6:30 a. m. The boundaries of the territory within which the drive will take place is the Walnut Ridge pike on the south, Blue river on the east, Pan Handle railroad on the north and Westland church road on the west, and will center on the John T. Hill farm.

Bre'r Fox will please take notice and stay within the district mentioned.

GALLANT UNCLE JOE.

Speaker Cannon Tells Pretty Story Why He Opposes Woman Suffrage.

Speaker Cannon of the house of representatives recently received one of the most beautiful clusters of American Beauties he ever saw; at least that is what he told them when they were ushered into his room at the capitol to be introduced to the "next president," says a Washington special dispatch to the New York Times. There were twenty in the cluster, or, to be more accurate, in the "bevy." They were students at the Martha Washington seminary in Washington and came from almost as many states, including Maryland, Arkansas, Texas, Georgia, Tennessee, New York and Virginia, and, luckiest of all, one came from Illinois.

And maybe the little Illinois maiden didn't blush. Uncle Joe plied her with questions about her people and her life in Washington. He said nice things to the others, too, but before they left he took a rap at woman suffrage.

"I appreciate the great honor you have paid me," he said. "However, I rather doubt whether you young ladies from Georgia, Texas, Virginia, Arkansas and other states in the south really want to see me elected. No, I am opposed to woman suffrage, and I'll tell you why. Pretty women like you would always control two votes—your own and some man's." The girls blushed.

"Now, I can tell," continued the speaker. "I only have to look into your eyes when they light up that way to be sure that each of you would determine how some man would vote."

NEIGHBORS THAT WERE COLD.

"Trinity Church an' Cimitry" Didn't Patronize Cafe, Newell Tells Court.

John Newell of Pittsburg, owner of Newell's hotel, a sporting man, humorist and brother-in-law of the late Daniel O'Day, almost broke up a session of court the other day over which Judge Marshall Brown was presiding, says a Pittsburg special dispatch to the New York Times.

Newell appeared to protest against the increase of taxes on his hotel because of the widening of Oliver avenue, in the rear of the hotel. With tears in his eyes Newell told Judge Brown that he had not been benefited by the widening; that not even his neighbors on the opposite side of the street from his Oliver avenue entrance used it to enter his cafe.

Judge Brown was greatly interested by the argument and then, as an afterthought, asked Newell who his neighbors on the opposite side of the street were.

"Trinity church an' the cimitry," yer honor," replied Newell, smiling through his tears.

Judge Brown's dignity left him. He shook with laughter for three minutes while the tipstaves vainly tried to restore order. When Judge Brown finally recovered he said:

"I guess that will be 'about enough for you, Mr. Newell."

No decision was rendered.

Boat Club on a University Campus.

President Judson of Chicago university met with twenty or thirty of the university's alumni the other night at the Harvard club in New York. He told them about the present condition of the institution and about the plans for the future based on John D. Rockefeller's munificent gifts of the last two years, says the New York Times. He told the alumni that some day Chicago university could have its boat club on the campus. Plans now being carried out contemplate bringing water from Lake Michigan right up to the front steps of the university. In reporting informally on the condition of the university the president said that because of recent gifts there was no need to pursue a policy of retrenchment at Chicago; that the salaries of the instructors, indeed, were being raised.

Republican "Want ads" Bring Results

W. B. REDUSO for LARGE WOMEN

Restraints tendency to overfleshiness, and moulds the over-developed proportions into graceful outlines hitherto thought to be obtainable only by slighter figures.

This splendid result is attained by an unjoined apron extension which reaches down over the abdomen and hips, giving the wearer absolute freedom of movement.

This feature absolutely eliminates the necessity of any harness-like devices and straps, hitherto deemed essential on corsets of this kind.

Reduso Style 750—(For tall stout women), which is illustrated here, is built as per description, with medium high bust. Made of durable coutil, in white or drab. Hose supporters front and sides. Sizes 22 to 36. Price, $3.00

Reduso Style 760—(For short stout women), is the same as style 750 except that the bust is somewhat lower all around. Made of white and drab coutil. Hose supporters front and sides. Sizes 24 to 36. Price, $3.00

W. B. NUFORM & ERECT FORM CORSETS can be found on sale at dealers everywhere at $1.00 and up.

ROBERT W. CHAMBERS.

Copyright, 1906, by Robert W. Chambers.

One of these occasions when he needed it was approaching. He had made a "killing" at Desmond's and had used the money to stop up the more threatening gaps in the tottering financial fabric known as his "personal accounts." The fabric would hold for awhile, but meantime he needed money to go on with. And Lella evidently had none. He tried everybody except Plank. He had scarcely the impudence to go to Plank just yet, but when completing the vicious circle he found his borrowing capacity exhausted and himself once more face to face with the only hope, Plank, he sat down to consider seriously the possibility of the matter.

Of course Plank owed him more than he could ever pay—the ungrateful parvenu—but what Plank had thought of that check transaction he had never been able to discover.

Somewhat or other he must put Plank under fresh obligations, and that might have been possible had not Lella invaded the ground, leaving nothing, now that Plank was secure in club life.

Of course the first thing that presented itself to Mortimer's consideration was the engineering of Plank's matrimonial ambitions. Clearly the man had not changed. He was always at Sylvia's heels. He was seen with her in public. He went to the Belwether house a great deal. No possible doubt but that he was as infatuated as ever. And Quarrier was going to marry her next November—that is, if he, Mortimer, chose to keep silent about a certain midnight episode at Shotover.

Several times he called up Quarrier on the phone and made appointments to lunch with him, but these meetings never resulted in anything except luncheons which Mortimer paid for, and matters were becoming desperate.

So one day, after having lunched too freely, he sat down and wrote Plank the following note:

My Dear Beverly—You will remember that I once promised you my aid in securing what, to you, is the dearest object of your existence. I have thought, I have pondered, I have given the matter deep and, I may add without irreverence, prayerful consideration, knowing that the life's happiness of my closest friend depended on my judgment and wisdom and intelligence to secure for him the opportunity to crown his life's work by the acquisition of the brightest jewel in the diadem of old Manhattan.

"By George, that's wickedly good, though!" chuckled Mortimer, refreshing himself with his old standby, an apple, quartered and soaked in very old port. So he sipped his apple and swallowed it and picked up his pen again, chary of overdoing it:

All I say to you is, be ready! The time is close at hand when you may boldly make your avowal. But be ready! All depends upon the psychological moment. An instant too soon, an instant too late, and you are lost. And she is lost forever. Remember! Be faithful; trust in me, and wait. And the instant I say, "Speak!" pour out your soul, my dear friend, and be certain you are not pouring it out in vain.

Writing about "pouring out" made him thirsty, so he fortified himself several times, and then, sealing the letter, went out to a letter box and stood looking at it.

"If I mail it I'm in for it," he muttered. After awhile he put the letter in his pocket and walked on.

"By George, that's wickedly good, though!"

"It really doesn't commit me to anything," he reflected at last, halting before another letter box. And as he stood there, hesitating, he glanced up and saw Quarrier entering the Lenox club. The next moment he flung up the metal box lid, dropped in his letter and followed Quarrier into the club.

Then events tumbled forward almost without a push from him. Quarrier was alone in a window corner, drinking vichy and milk and glancing over the afternoon papers. He saw Mortimer and invited him to join him, and Mortimer, being thirsty, took champagne.

"I've been trying a new coach," said Quarrier in his colorless and rather agreeable voice, and he went on leisurely explaining the points of the new mail coach which had been built in Paris after plans of his own, while Mortimer gulped glass after glass of chilled wine, which seemed only to make him thirstier. Meantime he listened, really interested, except that his fleshy head was too full of alcohol and his own project to contain additional statistics concerning coaching. Besides, Quarrier, who had never been overcordial to him, was more so now—enough for Mortimer to venture on a few tentative suggestions of a financial nature, and though, as usual, Quarrier was not responsive, he did not, as usual, get up and go away.

A vague hope stirred Mortimer that it might not be beyond his persuasive tongue to make this chilly, reticent young man into a friend some day—a helpful friend. Once or twice he thought Quarrier looked at him rather strangely, but he would show Quarrier that he was a friend—a good, staunch friend—and that Quarrier had long, long undervalued him. Waves of sentiment spread through and through him. His affection for Quarrier dampened his eyes, and still he blabbed on and on, gazing with brimming eyes upon Quarrier, who sat back silent and attentive as Mortimer circled and blundered nearer and nearer to the crucial point of his destination.

Midway in one of his linguistic ellipses Quarrier leaned forward and caught his arm in a grip of steel. Another man had entered the room. Mortimer, made partly conscious by the pain of Quarrier's viselike grip, was sober enough to recognize the impropriety of his continuing aloud the veiled story he had been constructing with what he supposed to be a cunning as matchless as it was impenetrable.

Later he found himself upstairs in a private cardroom, facing Quarrier across a table, and still talking and quenching his increasing thirst. He knew now what he was telling Quarrier. He was unveiling the parable. He was stripping metaphor from a carefully precise story. He used Sylvia's name presently; presently he used Sylvia's name. A moment later—or was it an hour?—Quarrier stopped him, coldly, without a trace of passion, demanding corroborative detail. And Mortimer gave it, wagging his head and one fat forefinger as emphasis.

"You saw that?" repeated Quarrier, deadly white of a sudden.

"Yes, and I"—

"At 3 in the morning?"

"Yes, an' I want"—

"You saw him enter her room?"

"Yes, an' I wan' ter say thish to you, because I'm your fren'. Don' wan' anny fren's mine get fooled on women. See? Thash how I feel. I respec' the sect. See? Women, lovely women. See? Respec' sect. Gimme y'han, buzzer—er—brother Quarrier. Your m' fren'; I'm your fren'. I know how it is. Gutter wife m'own. Rotten one. Stingy. Takes money outter m' pockets. Dam' extravagant. Ruin me. Say, old boy, what about dividend due 'morrow on Orange County Eclectic—mean Erlextic—no—mean 'Letric! Damn!—Wasser masser tongue?"

Opening his fond and foggy eyes and finding himself alone in the card room he began to cry, and a little later, attempting to push the electric button, he fell over a lounge and lay there, his shirt front soiled with wine, one fat leg trailing to the floor, not the ideal position for slumber perhaps, but what difference do attitudes and postures and poses make when a gentleman, in the sacred seclusion of his own club, is wooing the drowsy goddess with blasts of votive music through his em-purpled nose?

In the meantime, however, he was due to dine at the Belwether house, and when 8 o'clock approached and he had not returned to dress Lella called up Sylvia Landis on the telephone:

"My dear, Leroy hasn't returned, and I suppose he's forgotten about the bridge. I can bring Mr. Plank, if you like."

"Very well," said Sylvia, adding, "if Mr. Plank is there may I speak to him a moment?"

So Lella rose, setting

d Plank came in from the settled himself heavily in

"Is that you, Mr. Plank? Yes. Will you dine with us at 8? Bridge afterward, if you don't mind."

"Thank you."

"And, Mr. Plank, you had a note from me this morning?"

"Yes."

"Please disregard it."

"If you wish."

"I do. It is not worth while." And as Plank made no comment, "I have no further interest in the matter. Do you understand?"

"No," said Plank doggedly.

"I have nothing more to say. I am sorry. We dine at 8," concluded Sylvia hurriedly.

Plank hung up the receiver and sat eying it for awhile in silence. Then his jaw began to harden and his under lip protruded and he folded his great hands, resting them in front of him on the edge of the desk, brooding there, with eyes narrowing like a sleepy giant at prayer.

When Lella entered in her evening wraps she found him there, so immersed in reverie that he failed to hear her, and she stood a moment at the doorway, smiling to herself, thinking how pleasant it was to come down ready for the evening and find him there, as though he belonged where he sat and was part of the familiar environment.

Recently she had grown younger in a smooth skinned, full lipped way—so much younger that it was spoken of.

"Beverly," she said, "I am ready."

Plank stood up, dazed from his reverie, and walked toward her. His white tie had become disarranged. She raised her hands, halting him, and pulled it into shape for him, consciously innocent of the intimacy.

"Thank you," he said. "Do you know how pretty you are this evening?"

"Yes. I was very happy at my mirror. Do you know, the withered years seem to be dropping from me like leaves from an autumn sapling. And I feel young enough to say so poetically. Did Sylvia try to flirt with you over the wire?"

"Yes, as usual," he said drily, descending the stairs beside her.

"And really you don't love her any more?" she queried.

"Scarcely." His voice was low and rather disagreeable, and she looked up.

"I wish I knew what you and Sylvia find to talk about so frequently, if you're not in love."

But he made no answer, and they drove away to the Belwether house, a rather wide, old style mansion of brown stone, with a stoop dividing its ugly facade, and a series of unnecessary glass doors blockading the vestibule.

A drawing room and a reception room flanked the marble tiled hall. Behind these the dining room ran the width of the rear.

There were half a dozen people there lounging informally between the living room on the second floor and Sylvia's apartments in the rear—the residue from a luncheon and bridge party given that afternoon by Sylvia to a score or so of card-mad women. A few of these she had asked to remain for an informal dinner and a desperate game later—the sort of people she knew well enough to lose to heavily or win from without remorse—Grace Ferrall, Marion Page, Agatha Calthness. Trusting to the telephone that morning, she had secured the Mortimers and Quarrier, failing three men, and now the party, with Plank as Mortimer's substitute, was complete, all thorough gamblers—sex mattering nothing in the preparation.

MOORS DESPERATE

Reports of Further Fierce Fighting Come From Morocco.

TRIBESMEN UP IN ARMS

Opposition to the French Occupation Grows Stronger on the Part of the Desert Men.

French Forces Encounter Desperate Opposition From a Vast Horde of Arabs.

Paris, Feb. 4.—Eight Frenchmen were killed and fifty wounded in a desperate conflict which the French forces in Morocco have had with natives just south of Ka Bah Ber Rohid. Word of this engagement was received here today from General D'Amade, the commanding general in Morocco, who represents that a French column commanded by Colonel Boutegourd was suddenly attacked by a vast horde of Arabs while marching to the south for the purpose of punishing the Chaouia tribesmen.

The combat opened at midday. Thousands of Moors seemed to spring from the hills and sought to surround the French column. A fierce fight followed which lasted two hours, the enemy finally retreating with heavy loss. Meanwhile the French column was reinforced by two companies of infantry and a battery of artillery commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Brolard, and after the Arabs had been driven off the combined forces returned to Kas Bah Ber Rohid.

The dead include Lieutenant Ricard of the Third African Chasseurs, four privates of the foreign legion, two chasseurs and one sharpshooter. Lieutenant Colonel Passard was among the wounded. It is believed the tribesmen who opposed the French soldiers included the Mozambas as well as the Chaouias.

Storm Overcomes Soldiers.

Ain Zefra, Algeria, Feb. 4.—Twenty-one men of the Twentieth company of the foreign legion and possibly others of the same company perished on Feb. 1 in a blinding snow storm which overtook the soldiers on their way to Fort Hassa. The entire company became separated and later searchers recovered the bodies of twenty-one of them. A section of the company succeeded in reaching Fort Hassa in a pitiable condition, but many are unaccounted for.

FOLLOWED BY SUICIDE

Witness in Alleged Arson Conspiracy Took His Own Life.

Cincinnati, Feb. 4.—As the result of an investigation in what is declared to be a plot on the part of some insurance men and traveling merchants to start incendiary fires in stores opened for that purpose, secure the insurance and money and then decamp, two warrants have been sworn out by the state fire marshal for the arrest of Louis Levison and Harry Kohn, on a charge of arson. The investigation of the alleged conspiracy has been going on for about two weeks, many witnesses having been called before Assistant State Fire Marshals Ambrose and Sweeney, who have been making the investigation.

One of the men who was questioned by them was A. K. Murray, who committed suicide in the Commercial Tribune building here by cutting his throat with a razor. He was closely questioned by the fire marshals as to his knowledge of certain acts in connection with fires of recent date and the collection of alleged fraudulent insurance. He was never actually placed under arrest, but appeared to be greatly worried over the matter. The news of his suicide came just before the arrest of Kohn and Levison.

The extent of the alleged conspiracy is as yet not fully known, but it is said that more arrests will follow.

Sought an Object Lesson.

Toledo, O., Feb. 4.—Handcuffed and shackled, Police Judge James Austin, Jr., was carried to the patrol wagon and taken to the workhouse, where he will serve a short time with the inmates for the experience to be gained. The judge sentenced himself to the workhouse because he wanted to learn by experience what punishment he was imposing upon others.

Druce Case Fizzing Out.

London, Feb. 4.—Almost the last prop was knocked from under the Druce myth yesterday when the master in chancery dismissed G. H. Druce's civil suit for the possession of the estate of the late Duke of Portland. The attorney for Druce appealed the case and the appeal was allowed.

WHICH STORY DO YOU WANT?

The Daily Republican wishes to ascertain which of the following stories is desired for the next serial to be published after the present story, "The Fighting Chance," is finished. The story receiving the most requests will be printed next and the other stories in order of standing. Send us your preference by card, phone or personal call before February 10th. Following is a list of a few of the stories we can secure for publication in the Republican.

The Mystery

By Stewart Edward White and Samuel Hopkins Adams. To the worth of this story there are two substantial tributes—first, that it was run as a serial by the London Sphere, a publication noted for its discrimination in the selection of serials and which rarely uses an American story; second, that "The Mystery" was one of the "good sellers" of 1907. This is a story of mystery and adventure on new lines. The style is graphic and forceful as the "copy" of a skillful reporter of an important news event. The part of the hero, unfolds gradually until he stands revealed as the rarest combination of whimsical humor and cool courage ever presented, perhaps in fiction. The narrative, which conveys the impression of reality, not fiction, is swift and alluring, holding the interest of the reader as with hooks of steel.

His Courtship

By Helen R. Martin, author of "Tillie: A Mennonite Maid." In the main this story is a record of the adventures of a young Doctor of Philosophy, who conspires to play the humble role of hired hand at Mr. Morningstar's farm boarding house that he may have opportunity for serious and scholarly meditations and avoid the blandishments of fascinating young lady boarders. The resulting complications make a story as rich in humor, as provocative of laughter as any that has been written in recent years. The characters are as interesting as one's intimate friends.

The Plow Woman

By Eleanor Gates, author of "The Biography of a Prairie Girl." A story of the winning of the west; of the ways and wiles of the savage Sioux; of brave soldiers and daring frontiersmen; of a stubborn hate coming down from the civil war; of love tender, brave and true. He who reads shall know that a tale of Dakota of thirty years ago may kindle and inspire as much as any story of times remote; that the says of romance are near, not far off. The narrative begins quietly and rises steadily in interest to a climax as absorbing and inspiring as has been presented in any novel or drama, old or new.

Richard the Brazen

By Cyrus Townsend Brady, author of "The Southerner," "For the Freedom of the Sea," etc., and Edwaid Peple, author of "A Broken Rosary," "The Prince Chap," etc. In "Richard the Brazen" we put before the reader a knight errant worthy of the best days of chivalry, though he is of the present, and we find him in the garb of a cowboy. The superb courage with which he rescues from certain death a young woman whom he had never before seen, and the reckless daring with which he risks his reputation in attempt to win this woman under an assumed name, will appeal strongly to every lover of romance and admirer of courage. How Richard prospered in his enterprise under difficulties which would discourage any but the most stout hearted we leave the reader to find out, and a most delightful pastime it will prove.

The King of Diamonds

By Louis Tracy, author of "The Wings of the Morning," "The Pillar of Light," etc. Gripping the reader fast with its tale of the astounding transformation, in one day, of a ragged London waif into the possessor of incalculable wealth, this story by Louis Tracy measures up fully to the standard of this romancer's other popular tales. In the unfolding of the story he depicts not merely the change in the hero's material circumstances, but the interesting development of his character. The stirring adventures in which Philip Anson became embroiled by reason of his suddenly acquired riches, literally sent to him from heaven, his loyalty to the girl friend of his childhood and his manly devotion with Mr. Tracy's well known skill.

Red Saunders

By Henry Wallace Phillips. This is the famous story of Red Sanders, big Red, tough Red of the plains and mines. We shall follow this expansive man through his days of toughness and sinfulness up to the great day of his life, the day that shall bring the metamorphosis of Red. This trumpeter will not give the story away by indicating how this transformation shall come about—whether through the remorse or repentance of Red, his conviction of sin, his fear of the damnation of the wicked, his yearning for the peace that passeth understanding, or whether it shall be the love of woman that shall bring this giant to his knees and make him as a little child. The trumpeter will only promise that this conversion of Red shall be one of the most interesting and delicious episodes in all fiction, which the reader will enjoy and doubtless remember through all the years of his life.

TOO MUCH FOR HIM

France, the Iron Man of Portugal, Bows Before Public Storm.

WISDOM OF THIS COURSE

Was Doubtless Suggested by the Violent Demonstrations Which Took Place In Front of His House.

With the Resignation of the Dictator Peace In Troubled Country Seems Now to Be Assured.

Lisbon, Feb. 4.—Under a new regime with a new king and the establishment of a new cabinet, Portugal seems to be for the moment at peace. There is an underlying current of revolution, however, and the strictest measures are being taken to preserve order. An official statement has been given out that perfect order existed throughout Portugal.

Franco, the once dictator, was forced to resign because of the bitterness of the people against him, and the new cabinet will strive for the welfare of the fatherland under the presidency of Rear Admiral Don Amal. Another official statement given out was to the effect that the president of the cabinet would be supported by all the groups of monarchists who had agreed to forget previous differences.

The situation for Premier Franco after the assassination of the king and crown prince, became impossible. During the days which preceded the tragedy and during the tumultuous manifestations on the streets, with the later discovery of vast stores of arms and bombs, public opinion backed him in his efforts to maintain order, but the murders changed the entire complexion of the situation. He has not been seen on the streets since his meeting with the king immediately after the latter's arrival from Villa Vicosa, but all possible places where he might be have been closely watched.

After a long conversation with Queen Amelie, Premier Franco announced that he had resigned, saying that he believed this step would restore calm in Portugal. The violent demonstrations in front of Franco's house doubtless convinced him of the wisdom of this course. It is declared that Franco intends to leave Portugal.

The new cabinet, which is composed of the strongest members of various factions, but all opposed to Franco, has drawn to it a strong patriotic supporting movement. During the night Admiral Don Amal and the chiefs of the monarchist parties held a protracted session and laid out a program looking to the pacification of the people. Word has been received here that a British fleet, the number of the vessels not being stated, has passed Oporto.

The investigations of the police show that the murders were carefully planned. On Saturday the assassins met secretly in the back room of a cafe and there laid out every step of the plot, which they were enabled to do, as all the details relating to the homecoming of the king had been made public. To each was assigned a post in the work of shooting down the members of the royal family, but lots were drawn for the selection of each particular victim. Those who drew Queen Amelie and Prince Manuel failed to carry out their bloody task.

The chamber in the palace where repose the bodies of King Carlos and the crown prince has been draped in mourning and arranged to resemble a chapel. The biers are surrounded by lighted candles and Queen Amelie, widow of the king, and the dowager Queen Maria Pia, his mother, watch continually at the side of the dead.

The body of the king is clad in the uniform of the commander-in-chief of the army, while the prince wears a uniform of a captain of the Second Lancers. Several masses for the repose of the souls of the departed have already been said in the mortuary chamber. The funeral will be held Feb. 8, and the bodies will lie in state beginning today. It is expected that the funerals will be attended by the Prince of Wales, Prince Charles of Bourbon, the Duke of Oosta, the cousin of King Victor Emmanuel, a special French embassy and detachments of the foreign regiments of which the late king was honorary colonel.

The condition of Queen Amelie, contrary to rumors, is relatively good. The Duke of Oporto, brother of the late king, has established his residence at the palace, where he will remain for a time. The Countess of Paris, Queen Amelie's mother is on her way here. Charles Page Bryan, the American minister to Portugal, was the first diplomat to offer condolences to the royal family.

Little by little Lisbon is regaining its normal aspect, although all the public buildings and the palace are still guarded by cordons of soldiers and detachments of the municipal guard. A number of the newspapers of the city have suspended publication.

The Hungarian chamber of deputies refused to vote a motion condoning with the royal family of Portugal in the death of King Carlos.

BIG POLAR AUTO RACE

Advice For Contestants From Experienced Arctic Travelers.

USE OF SLEDS SUGGESTED.

Vancouver Man Tells How Contestants In New York to Paris Race Can Relieve Weight on Autos—Explorer Says Use Horses to Haul Supplies.

Harry G. McLean of Vancouver, B. C., who was interviewed at New York on the overland automobile race from New York to Paris, which has been arranged by the New York Times and the Matin of Paris, says there are several things necessary for the comfort of the men on the trip to which attention might well be called.

Mr. McLean has spent a great deal of time in British Columbia and has also been in the arctic sections of Alaska, having made several trips to Point Barlow, the extreme northern point where many of the whaling fleets make their headquarters during the whaling season. He has traveled quite extensively by sled and knows many of the most obscure paths and trails of the country that is never without its covering of snow, and therefore his views may be considered as helping the solution of the problem that faces the men who will undertake to drive the machines across ice and snow, says the New York Times.

"The more I think of the trip, of which I have been reading in one section of the country and another since its inception, the more I am convinced that it can be made, but it will be made under conditions never before met by men. In the first place, the trip cannot be made unless accompanied by guides and sleds, so that every possible bit of weight can be taken from the cars—that is to say, that all camping material, all food and extra clothing should be hauled on sleds.

"These sled trains can then serve two purposes—first, to take weight from the cars and then as scouts and trail breakers, so to speak, going ahead of the cars and, to a certain extent, picking out the best way for the machines to go and in a very small way breaking the trail of the snow.

"The sleds more commonly in use in the arctic regions are from nine to ten feet long and twenty-two inches wide, the runners about twelve inches deep and the sides about eighteen inches high. The sled proper is an open framework of oak or hickory, no more wood being used than is absolutely necessary. All the parts are lashed together with strips of sealskin or walrus hide. Few or no nails are used; so, while the sled is very strong, it is also flexible and able to withstand the rough usage to which it is constantly subjected in traveling. In passing I might interject that the automobile construction should receive a thought in this direction of elasticity, for there are some terrible wrenches to be undergone. The sled cover, of light drilling, is made large enough to spread all over the whole length of the sled on the bottom.

"Incidentally, harnessing the dogs to the sleds, which it is well to know about, for the natives cannot be entirely depended to stick to the job, is quite an interesting undertaking. The harness is made of strips of heavy ticking, canvas, sennit or seal hide and is all in one piece for each dog. A strip goes around the dog's neck and crosses in front of the chest, where the two parts are fastened together to form a collar. The ends then go underneath the fore legs and lead up, one on each side, to the dog's back. Another strip is fastened to the top of the collar at the back of the neck and leads along the back to meet the other two ends, and here all three pieces are secured together and made fast to a small piece of rope about two feet long.

"In harnessing a dog the collar is put on over the head, each of his fore feet put through one of the loops formed by the ends coming together, and he is ready to be made fast to the sled. A larger rope, the length of which depends upon the number of dogs to be used, is made fast to the front of the sled, and to this is secured the small rope of the dog's harness, the dogs being yoked in pairs, one on each side of the central rope. The team generally consists of an odd number of dogs, the odd dog being hitched to the central line in front of the other dogs and acts as a leader. This plan is used by the white people in the lower Yukon and is considered better than the plan of the natives of hitching the dogs one ahead of the other.

"Another thing of importance next to the food is the camp gear to be used when stops are made for the night where there are no native huts or other shelter, of course, tents to accommodate each party—that is, the party in each machine. But this is added weight to the equipment to be carried on the sleds and can easily be done away with. The favorite way of the Eskimos for camping in that part of the country is to build snow houses at night when they get ready to stop.

"The wind packs the snow so hard that it can easily be cut into blocks with a long knife. From these blocks in a short time can be constructed a small strong house, the cracks being stopped up with loose snow, which freezes quickly, and for the door a large block of snow can be used. In this way the house is made practically air tight. Soon the warmth of the bodies of three or four people will raise the temperature of the place so that it is fairly comfortable, and some of the clothing can be removed. On account of the difficulties of construction a snow house cannot be made as large as a tent, but where there is no tent snow houses are a necessity, and whatever discomforts they entail are passed off as unavoidable and not thought of.

"Taking it all in all, in traveling in the arctic regions philosophical common sense is as great a help to living as it is elsewhere. If one is subjected to miserable discomforts it must be regarded simply as a part of the life.

"There is one other thing to which I would like to call attention if I may. It is always well before starting out to resume the journey in the morning to take as much tea and water as one can hold. It is impossible to get water during the day without stopping to build a fire and melt the snow unless one carries a flask inside the clothing, and this stopping uses up time.

"Snow is bad for the mouth and in time makes it sore, besides not being sufficient to quench the thirst except for the moment. The worst feature of eating snow is that if one gives way to the temptation there is no stopping for the rest of the day, for, while it quenches the thirst for the time being, it only serves to increase it in the long run, and shortly after taking some snow one is more thirsty than before.

"I found that by drinking in the morning I seldom was thirsty until night and had no great desire to drink unless a halt was made in the middle of the day and a fire started for tea."

Evelyn Briggs Baldwin, arctic explorer, who was the meteorologist with the Peary expedition of 1893-4, second in command of the Wellman expedition of 1898-9 and leader of the Baldwin-Ziegler polar expedition of 1901-2, said the other day in speaking of the New York to Paris automobile race:

"I think the race is entirely feasible. Having passed so much time in the arctic region, I naturally feel I am competent to judge of the likelihood of the contestants in the race getting successfully through the upper part of Alaska and Siberia, although, of course, arctic explorers have not much to do with automobiles, as will be readily understood.

"I think the contestants would find their journey greatly aided if they make use of horses whenever such use might be necessary. On the Baldwin-Ziegler expedition I caused a number of tough little ponies to be purchased in Siberia and shipped to the north, where we made excellent use of them.

"They are extremely hardy, and one pony will haul as much as one entire dog team, or about 800 or 900 pounds. They do not 'eat their heads off,' as the saying goes, and compressed hay can be carried along on the loads. If the occasion arises they can be utilized for food, as was done on the Ziegler-Baldwin expedition, and those who ate the meat were not aware that they were not eating beef until some time afterward.

"Reindeer cannot haul much more than ninety or a hundred pounds, so it will be seen at once how great an advantage it is to have ponies instead of reindeer. I paid about $50 apiece for ponies in Siberia. Eskimo dogs cost me about $3 each in Greenland, but much more than that to have them delivered on board our ship.

"By taking ponies along with them the contestants in the forthcoming race will find their troubles greatly lessened, for the animals will extricate them from many bad places in the road. The horses will travel on an average almost as far each day as can the autoists with their machines through the worst parts of their trip—that is, in Alaska and in northeastern Siberia.

"The party must have some means of transporting extra parts for their automobiles, food and other necessities, for they cannot carry sufficient supplies of this kind on the machines without loading them down so that good progress will be impossible. If horses are not utilized, dog teams will have to be used, and they are not as serviceable, need more looking after and collectively will eat more than will a Siberian pony.

"As for obtaining them, they could be purchased in western Siberia and sent along the route through northeastern Siberia, say, as far as the Kolyma river, where the autoists could be met. As the ponies would not be needed until next fall, there would be plenty of time to send them from points where they might be purchased to the Kolyma river or thereabout.

"Of course I am most anxious that the American contestants shall win, but whatever their nationality I hope that the best sportsmen and those who do best shall be victors."

Aluminium Money.

Nearly 32,000,000 coins made of aluminium have recently been struck from the royal mint in England for circulation in Uganda and the Nigerian protectorates, says a London cable dispatch to the New York Times. Each coin bears the value either of a cent or of 2 mills and is perforated in the center, like Chinese coins, in order to permit the natives to string them together. The advantage of aluminium as a coin is due to its light weight and the fact that it is the best non-germ bearing metal known.

GREAT DEMAND

For Hyomei, the Catarrh Cure That Johnson's Drug Store Guarantee.

The sale record of all medicine by Johnson's drug store has been broken by the recent remarkable demand for Hyomei. This is not alone due to the peculiar weather conditions that have increased catarrhal troubles, but the way in which Johnson's Drug Store sell Hyomei is undoubtedly responsible for many sales.

With every dollar outfit they give their personal guarantee to refund the money if Hyomei does not give absolute satisfaction. Ask Johnson's drug to explain to you about this guarantee.

There is no stomach dosing with Hyomei. It is a medicated air treatment that kills all catarrhal germs, preventing their growth and making catarrh impossible. It has cured many right herein Rushville, and you should try it now and get relief from catarrh.

Jerry Mock, who was injured several days ago, is improving nicely.

BY THE WAYSIDE

"We lost in the swap," said Dr. V. W. Tevis Sunday evening in giving a foreword of a sermon he intends to preach in the near future on the "Excitement in Religion," which has to do with showing a proper religious fervor if good results are to be obtained. Dr. Tevis explained: "Years ago the Methodists had the reputation for being a congenial, happy, informal, warm hearted lot of individuals while the Presbyterians were the very essence of cold formality and reserved at all times. Now it is just the opposite. We have swapped with them and we have lost in the swap."

Ladies and children are especially invited to our theatre, only the best will be shown. THE GRAND.
